

Series IV
Miscellany,
1915-1973

Box 18, Folder 7

Newspaper
Clippings,
1970-1972

0174

Edna Morrison photo
MRS. RICHARD BATES
Oregon wedding

Richard Bates Is Wed

Sheila Jean Maley and Richard Effingham Bates, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard J. Bates of Belvedere, were married in St. Stephen's Chapel in Portland.

The bride's parents, the Luren O. Maleys, live in Condon, Ore., where Mr. Maley is engaged in ranching.

A reception followed at the Bensin Hotel in Portland and the newlyweds left for a trip to Lake Tahoe.

They will live in Reno, where the groom, who served three years in the Army, is a junior at the University of Nevada.

His father is a real estate broker.

Sheila, a graduate of Stephens College, wore a white dotted Swiss gown with a wreath of Stephanotis in her hair.

The attendants wore pale green dotted Swiss dresses and carried daisies and baby's breath.

Marianne Dunn was maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Kathy William and Robin Oliver. The groom's brother Lesley was best man and usher, Mrs. Bates. The groom's grandmother, Mrs. Effingham Sutton, lives in the City.

Edis Morrison photo
MRS. RICHARD BATES
Oregon wedding

Richard Bates Is Wed

Sheila Jean Maley and Richard Effingham Bates, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard J. Bates of Belvedere, were married in St. Stephen's Chapel in Portland.

The bride's parents, the Luren O. Maleys, live in Condon, Ore., where Mr. Maley is engaged in ranching.

A reception followed at the Bensin Hotel in Portland and the newlyweds left for a trip to Lake Tahoe.

They will live in Reno, where the groom, who served three years in the Army, is a junior at the University of Nevada.

His father is a real estate broker.

Sheila, a graduate of Stephens College, wore a white dotted Swiss gown with a wreath of stephanotis in her hair.

The attendants wore pale green dotted Swiss dresses and carried daisies and baby's breath.

Marianne Dunn was maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Kathy William and Robin Oliver.

The groom's brother Lester was best man and usher, Mrs. Effingham Sutton, Robert Bates, The groom's grandmother, Mrs. Effingham Sutton, lives in the City.

Seaside 12/26/70
Services

For Lee H.

Markwood

Memorial services will be held tomorrow (Sunday) at Portola Valley for Lee H. Markwood, senior budget analyst at the Stanford University controller's office.

Mr. Markwood died yesterday at Sequoia Hospital, Redwood City, after a long illness. He was 64.

A native of Indiana, Mr. Markwood was raised in Spokane, and graduated Phi Beta Kappa from Washington State College in 1929.

He joined the W. P. Fuller Co. that year, and was transferred to the home office, San Francisco, in 1936.

He served the company until it was sold in 1962, becoming advertising manager and marketing manager.

Mr. Markwood served as lieutenant commander in the Navy in World War II.

He was senior warden at Christ Church Episcopal, 815 Portola road, Portola Valley, and for many years senior lay reader.

He is survived by his wife, Gwen; a son, William P. Markwood, and a sister, Mrs. Louise Goodrich, of Redwood City.

Services will be held at 3 p.m. at Christ Church Episcopal, followed by interment at Alta Mesa Memorial Park, Palo Alto.

The family prefers contributions to the Markwood Memorial Fund at the church.

1972?

PORTRAITS FOR WAR COLLEGE — Two retired rear admirals who have lectured for many years at Naval War College, Henry E. Eccles, left, and Richard W. Bates, right, pose with artist Tony Sarro of Providence before their new oil portraits. The admirals were honored with the paintings for their teaching efforts at college which dates back to 1940. The paintings were unveiled at a reception given by Vice Adm. Richard G. Colbert, college president, at his quarters Friday night.

(Navy Photo)

Both Live In Newport

Retired Admirals Still Lecture

By WILLIAM N. POWERS
Navy Chief Photographer

Two retired rear admirals whose combined active service totals 64 years continue to contribute their services to the Navy as lecturers at the Naval War College.

Rear Adm. Richard W. Bates of 12 Mt. Vernon St. and Rear Adm. Henry E. Eccles of 101 Washington St. speak on subjects in which they have wide experience.

Adm. Bates lectures on "Naval Decision Making" to two of the college's three schools. He was commanding officer of five Navy ships before and during World War II.

He also served as chief of staff of the bombardment and fire support groups of the Seventh Fleet during the assault on the Philippine Islands in the latter part of the war.

Adm. Eccles, who is also a consultant to the college, speaks on military logistics. His professional experience includes having been chief of staff for logistics for the commander of Allied Forces, Southern Europe, and he also headed the Logistics Department at the War College.

Both admirals hold the Navy Cross which they earned during combat action against the Japanese in World War II.

In addition to serving as lecturers, both frequently participate as observers at special functions of the college.

Included in these are the annual Global Strategy Discussions conducted each June, and the Seapower Symposium.

The Global Strategy Discussions bring together senior military officers and leaders in the business and industrial communities to discuss the nation's problems as a world power.

The Seapower Symposium last spring found naval leaders from 37 nations gathered to promote understanding of problems common to all maritime powers.

In addition to his other work,

Adm. Eccles teaches a graduate level logistics course at the college.

He has authored numerous magazine articles, and has written several books on logistics.

Adm. Bates has been associated with the War College since 1940. After completing the senior course in May, 1941, he became head of the Department of Strategy at the college.

He serves as vice-president of the recently formed Naval War College Foundation.

The foundation, a non-profit corporation, was organized to provide a means whereby gifts from private donors can be utilized to further the educational aims of the war college.

William Grosvenor, Businessman, Dies

William S. Grosvenor, Sr., 86, president of the former Grosvenor Dale Co., a retired life insurance agent, and a yachtsman, died last night at Hilltop, his estate at Ruggles and Carroll Avenues.

Management of the Grosvenor Dale firm was thrust upon Mr. Grosvenor when his father died while the son was still a student at Harvard.

The company, a cotton manufacturing firm in Connecticut, was sold in 1941. Mr. Grosvenor also worked for the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

He was a director of the old

People's Savings Bank and the Providence Building Co. He was a member of the Hope Club, the Agawam Hunt Club, Turks Head Club, Narragansett Boat Club, Tennis and Racquet Club of Boston, the Harvard Clubs of Boston and New York and the Union Club of New York.

He was also a member of the Preservation Society of Newport County, the Ida Lewis Yacht Club, the Spouting Rock Beach Association, the Newport Reading Room in Newport and the Brook Club and the Knickerbocker Club in New York City.

Mr. Grosvenor was an Army officer in World War I and served in World War II as an intelligence officer and liaison officer with the French in England and North Africa.

Mr. Grosvenor was born in Providence Nov. 3, 1886, a son of William and Rose Diamond Phinney Grosvenor. His father was one of the largest cotton manufacturers and merchants in New England.

William Grosvenor was educated by private tutors and was graduated from Groton School. He was graduated from Harvard in 1909. He was the husband of Mary Burnett Grosvenor.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mary Burnett Grosvenor, three sons, William Grosvenor Jr. of North Kingstown, Charles B. Grosvenor of New York and Newport and Richard G. Grosvenor of Middletown, artist and head of the art department at St. George's School, three daughters, Mrs. William P. Hazard of Tucson, Ariz., and Mrs. William C. Touret and Mrs. Carlson C. Collins of Providence; a brother, Theodore P. Grosvenor of Newport; two sisters, Mrs. George P. Gardner and Mrs. Richard C. Curtis of Boston; 17 grandchildren and four great grandchildren.

A funeral service will be held Friday at 2 p.m. in Emmanuel Church. Burial will be private.